I voluntarily agree to be interviewed as part of the Humanities Truck Oral History Project. I understand that the following items ("Collection") may be created from our interview:

- audio and/or video recordings
- edited transcripts and summaries
- photographs in original form or as digital copies
- personal documents in original form or as digital copies

I understand that the Collection will be donated at no cost to the American University Library. I agree that all rights to the Collection shall be given to American University. Specifically, I understand that American University may copy, use, and distribute to the public the Collection including but not limited to my interview (and other items above) for educational purposes, including, but not limited to, formats such as audio and/or video documentaries, pamphlets, print publications, public programming and/or performances, exhibits, online archives and/or publications, mobile platforms, and other new media resources. I also understand the Humanities Truck and American University may use the Collection for promotional purposes. Both the Interviewee and Interviewer will retain licenses to use these materials for any future purpose.

I agree to transfer at no cost to American University legal title, rights of publicity, and all literary rights from the Collection including copyright created from our interviews conducted on the date listed above. This gift does not preclude any use I may want to make of the information in the recordings and/or transcripts myself. I agree that American University owes me no compensation for my participation or for the rights I have granted in this form.

Any exceptions to this agreement must be listed below.
